

Orange Juice

Michael Rosen

We get orange juice
delivered to our door
with the milk,
on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
We get one pint of milk
one carton of orange juice.

So,
one Monday morning
I go out there
and there's one pint of milk and no orange.

So I go,
'Damn - the milkman's forgotten to deliver the orange.
I love orange juice for breakfast.'

So on Tuesday,
I got up in time to meet the milkman
and I say to him,
'Hey, you forgot to deliver the orange yesterday.'
'No, I never,' he said.
'Afraid you did,' I said.
'I delivered your orange yesterday,' he says.
'Well it wasn't there when I came to collect it.'
So I got another one off him.

On Wednesday,
same again,
one pint of milk
no orange.

So on Thursday
I waited for him again.
'No orange yesterday,' I said.
'Look I delivered it,' he says.
'Well it's disappearing,' I say.
'Someone's nicking it then,' he says
And off he went.

Suddenly,
my mind began to think . . .
Who is it creeping up to our doorstep?
Who's getting our lovely orange for their breakfast?

Someone on their way to work?
Someone walking a dog?

Someone who nips out and collects it and nips back in again
and then shares it out round the family?

So I made a plan.

On Friday
I got up
same time as the milkman, picked up the orange carton took it indoors
emptied the orange out into a jug poured in some orange squash up to about five centimetres from the top and then I took some hot Jamaica sauce we've got.
And I don't know whether you know what that's like
but if you just put a little speck of it on your tongue
it feels as if someone's put a match in your mouth.
I love it. I put it on my rice.
So I took this stuff
and I shook in half a bottle-load of it.
shuk shuk shuk shuk
yeah
shuk shuk shuk shuk
yeah.
Then I sealed up the carton and put it back on our doorstep in exactly the same place and then I went back to bed.

Now I had wanted to stay awake but I dozed off by mistake.
Anyway
when I got up
I went straight to the front door opened it and hohoho
there was one pint of milk and NO orange.
I was so pleased.

And then I thought -
I made up a little scene in my mind.
I thought,
Maybe,
my orange thief is
someone who nips out
nicks the orange,
nips back in
and shares it out with the family.
So this morning,

this person did just that.
Gets back indoors,
opens up the orange
everyone sitting round the breakfast table pours out a glass for everyone lifts up the glass
and goes,
'Here's best wishes to those lovely people at number 11
who give us our fresh orange.'
Raises it to the lips,
gulps,
and phoooooor
It feels like someone's jammed a banger in his mouth.
His mouth's on fire
And he goes dancing round the house for the next hour,
stuffs his head under the tap fills his mouth with water, goes off dancing round the house again he can't get rid of it.

Maybe that's what happened Maybe it didn't
It could have been a woman it could have been a kid.
All I know is
we haven't lost any more orange since.

Hohohoho
